ROMAN.AGES.IM · FREE FACT SHEET

Where was that in Roman Britain?

Official English Heritage pairings, kept in the spelling each page uses.

Roman name, as English Heritage writes it	The place today
Camulodunum	Colchester
Londinium	London
Verulamium	St Albans
Aqua Sulis	Bath (the spelling on the ingenuity page)
Lindum Colonia	Lincoln
Coria	Corbridge
Isurium Brigantium	Aldborough

In AD 60, Boudica, queen of the Iceni, destroyed Camulodunum (Colchester), Verulamium (St Albans) and Londinium (London). Camulodunum had been the province's main town, though Londinium quickly replaced it.

English Heritage names the three permanent legionary bases, in modern form, as Caerleon, Chester and York — each of 4,800 men. This sheet does not invent unofficial Latin names for them.

Corbridge, 2½ miles south of the wall, became one of only two substantial towns in the Hadrian's Wall zone. Aldborough was once Isurium Brigantum, civilian capital of the Brigantes, "the hill people."

Three questions

1. What modern place does English Heritage pair with Aqua Sulis?
2. Which three official towns did Boudica destroy?
3. What does Brigantes mean, on the official Aldborough page?

Answers: Bath. Camulodunum (Colchester), Verulamium (St Albans) and Londinium (London). "The hill people."

Sources: English Heritage, An introduction to Roman Britain; 7 ingenious things the Romans brought to Britain; History of Corbridge Roman Town; History of Aldborough Roman Site. Checked 17 November 2026. roman.ages.im is independent of English Heritage. No photographs are included on this sheet.

ReallyByte — Fun. Educational. Useless.